Photoshop allows you to use a highly flexible and open editing system. However, you can also turn off many of the very powerful editing tools when you need to work in a more simple way. For example, you can turn off the powerful content-aware (or 'magic wand' tool) that selects (highlights) an entire range of pixels within an image. Then, as an alternative, you can select a single pixel and then deselect it with a mouse click or CTRL+click. This is one of many great features that help you keep your images smaller. Photoshop also helps you create images with specific objects in them by, for example, automatically inserting logos or other images at preset distances and positions.

To create a brush, select the brush tool, hold Shift to select multiple strokes and paint to create a brush, and use the B key to make brush strokes. You can apply brushes to multiple layers or the entire image. You can also create your own brushes. The Airbrush tool allows you to create delicate, realistic water effects, and it's helpful for creating shadows and reflections. You can use this tool in the Brushes palette, or in the Brushes palette itself. After you've made a brush, you can use the Eraser tool to erase a brush stroke. The Eraser tool has many settings. You can use Adjustment Layers to apply and adjust Color and Black & White adjustments. You can use the Hue/Saturation adjustment to add or remove color. You can use an adjustment layer's parameters to fine-tune a specific color adjustment. To create a new color adjustment layer, choose Image > Adjustment Layers > New Adjustment Layer. You can also use Adjustment Brush to apply an adjustment to an area of an image.
