Keymacro is a utility for using keyboard macros in different programs. Macros are abbreviations, repetitions of keyboard combinations, allowing users to achieve different functions by means of a single composition of several keys. If you want to create macros for Windows, you must install the addon program that allows you to add a keyboard. You can create keyboard macros in any program that allows you to type on your computer, so you can type text without having to search for the keys by using shortcuts. PBMAD Partial keymap for Windows 95 and Windows NT 3.51: If you use a version of Windows other than Windows 95 or Windows NT 3.51, please download the original package from here and install it in a folder of your computer. You must register the program with your Windows account and install it, then you will need to click on the icon that will appear on your desktop and click on the link "PBMAD 3". You must then go to the settings of PBMAD and select the profile and language that corresponds to your version of Windows. The following help will be displayed on the dialogue of the installation program: - General options - Program settings - Select the right language General options: - Command-line arguments: You can define parameters of the program by including them on the command line, with a syntax that varies from program to program. You can, for example, define the user name and password of a host in a remote server, or the name of a file that you want to open. To use these options, just type the name of the options between the double quotes and enclose the name of the options between parentheses (it is not necessary to put a space before or after the parentheses). The following examples show the syntax for defining the username and password of a remote server and the name of the file that you want to open: (hostname.example.com "User" "Password") (filename.ext "txt") - Timeout: Timeout is the maximum number of seconds of delay between two successive commands or between two successive lines. - Language: Language is the language of the program. You can choose the program to use the language of your Windows version. - Port number: You can specify the port number (default: 22). - Password: You can specify the password of a remote server (default: "" empty string). - User name
