By Senzati RarIt may only be the inaugural episode of the Muppets, but it's already got a (fictional) shooting star. In the season four premiere of the Muppets – which airs in the US on ABC on September 21 at 8pm – Kermit the Frog puts on a dress and race to save Miss Piggy from the clutches of a villainous fashion designer, played by Ricky Gervais, in a comedy of errors that only the Muppets could pull off. “It’s a little bit about business and also love,” the actor tells Variety.
“It really isn’t a ‘relationship’ show. It’s just about friendship and love and finding peace and happiness and world peace.” The new show’s name, “It’s a Very Muppets Christmas” (with “season” as the plural), comes directly from the show’s creators, screenwriter Rich Appel and director David Silverman. “We named the show ‘Muppets’, but in the context of the show you’ll find that it’s not ‘Muppets’ so much,” says Appel. “It’s a very Muppets Christmas story. But it’s about Christmas. It’s about us wanting peace on earth and having that come to a conclusion in a way we don’t even think about.” Appel and Silverman grew up in the late 1970s and early 1980s in Chicago, growing up with a strong interest in the Muppets. “I was really quite obsessed with them and so it was something that really always came into my life,” says Appel. “The Muppets and music were the two things I always kind of went to to be 1cb139a0ed
