The spiked bloods were then incubated in parallel at 37°C for 1 h. The percentage of bacteria in the inoculated blood that migrated to the blood compartment was determined. Recovery (%) of 24-h incubation. Bacteria contained in blood bags inside incubators that were set at a temperature of 37°C and a CO₂ concentration of 5% for 24 h did not invade the blood bags at this temperature and concentration during incubation. The residual viability of E. coli in blood bags that were set at 37°C and a CO₂ concentration of 5% for 3 days was 100%, and the value increased to 99% after 4 days. Discussion ===== The results of this study suggest that culturing bacteria within blood bags is not recommended if they are to be used within an incubator. This would also apply for bags that are filled by the donor. For the incubation of blood bags
