Court of Criminal Appeals of Alabama. October 11, 1996. Jeffery S. Duffy, Sr., Birmingham, for Appellant. Jeff Sessions, Atty. Gen., and Robert S. Lamon, Asst. Atty. Gen., for Appellee. LONG, Judge. The appellant, Gerald Lee Fitzgerald, was convicted of robbery in the first degree. He was sentenced to 20 years' imprisonment. On appeal, he raises two issues, neither of which has any merit. I The appellant argues that his sentence is excessive. Specifically, he argues that his 20-year sentence for first-degree robbery is disproportionate to sentences imposed in similar cases in other jurisdictions. This court has held: "This Court has held that in determining whether a particular sentence is excessive, this Court must make `[a]bsent an abuse of discretion by the trial court, [this Court's] only review is to determine whether the sentence imposed is excessive.' Ex parte Moss, 598 So.2d 178, 180 (Ala.1991). `Mere similarity of circumstances is insufficient to justify a sentence imposed outside the specified limits set by the Legislature.' Id." Thomas v. State, 539 So.2d 375, 377 (Ala.Cr.App.1989) (emphasis added). This argument is procedurally barred because this court can find no evidence that the appellant ever presented this issue to the trial court. *1068 For the foregoing reasons, this argument is procedurally barred.
