The holothurians are marine organisms that resemble a cross between a starfish and a cucumber. They have a hard carapace with 10 to 20 segmented body walls, and a single, large foot which resembles an umbrella with numerous tentacles. The holothurians are distributed worldwide. They are found along the edges of coral reefs and in protected coastal lagoons. There are more than 100 species of holothurians, some of which are very valuable to humans for their use as food and medicine. The majority of the species are native to tropical waters. Many of these are from the Pacific Ocean and Indian Ocean. Others, such as the holothuria intestinalis, the starfish-cucumber of Mediterranean waters, are invasive species. Etymology The name Holothuria, Greek for "one having many openings", is a reference to the holothuria's large foot, which can have up to 300 arms, and its ability to pump water into the body cavity. Many other genera in the Holothuriidae are named after this genus, such as Acontiholothuria, Aholothuria, c9d1549cdd

Honesty : Form Honesty is a quality that every individual must have. We are all made up of three parts - Head, Heart and Hand. The head not only conceives ideas and become conscious of sensations; but is also the principal instrument of our perceptions (when compared with hands and arms). By it we analyze the flow of ideas, and are able to rank them. Both the heart and the hand are so closely connected with head, that they should also be considered as parts of the same instrument, and should be used by the head. HEAD is the throne of the soul and is used to investigate the truth of things. It possesses practical qualities and says: "If this, or that, are of any use, they should be promoted." HEART controls affections and emotions. It is the organ of sympathies, which are produced by certain truths that it feels, because the heart has more emotions in common with certain truths than it has with others. In this way, the heart is the great heart of emotion. HAND is the instrument through which we gather tangible goods and perform the functions of the body. It has no will or consciousness of its own, except to obey the head. COURSE OF STUDY : As Raja Ram Mohun Roy said: "The use of my head is to reason, the use of my heart is to be virtuous, and the use of my hand is to perform." In the Hindu tradition on karma we say that our conscience has a good, arid evil eyes. Good is used of all that happens that we approve, and evil of what we disapprove. So to continue into the proposition "Honesty is a quality that every individual must have", it would appear that a proper course of study is as follows: First of all, we must ascertain the qualities we approve and disapprove of in others
