I've been eyeing up this beauty of a pineapple-shaped reusable shopping bag for ages and am excited that I'm finally getting my mitts on one. And lucky me, it's available from Tuesday (August 8) onwards. The idea is the same as those old-fashioned wicker basket shopping bags (i.e. you've not missed out on a thing), which you put it in on the top of your trolley, knowing you won't have to dig it out of the bottom of your bag or basket as soon as you reach the checkout. It looks sleek and simple, and your family, friends and colleagues will think you're cool, rather than stinky, for knowing where to place your reusable bag. It's perfect for people like me who hate unpacking, but it seems to encourage more people to check out reusable bags (even, I assume, for those people who are a little less keen on unpacking). I just find it nicer to have a bag which can go on my trolley without having to lift the top up with a hole in it. The bag is £12.99, but it's worth it to get something a little bit different. Q: Converting an object to a string in Python I am trying to convert an object to a string using the toString method. I have tried: `def toString(self): return "LastName: '{0.last_name}'".format(self)` I get an error when I try to run it. `AttributeError: 'Person' object has no attribute 'last_name'` Any ideas? A: Don't use a class method (whose name begins with an upper case letter) for this. A class method usually either returns something or sets it. You obviously don't want to return anything here. Also you're using a placeholder in your format string. You're probably looking for: `"LastName: {0.last_name}"`
