Emergency "Code Brown Emergency" is the first episode of the second season of the CBS police procedural television series Blue Bloods, the 37th episode of the series. The episode was written by series co-creator Tom Fontana and directed by Tony nominee Jordan Tama. The episode was first broadcast on September 24, 2010 on CBS, part of the 2010-11 US fall television season. In the episode, Frank Reagan is framed for felonious assault. He is arrested and then only one person can save him—his wife. Plot Frank Reagan is arrested for assault, and the DA, Leo Thompson (Alfonso Domínguez), is afraid that Reagan will leave him vulnerable for a bigger fish to take. Frank's attorney, Kai Provenza (Max Greenfield), tells Frank to consider himself lucky for being framed for a misdemeanor, as grand juries seldom bring "not guilty" verdicts. Meanwhile, his son Sean (Harrison Abane) is jaded by having completed high school already. He becomes attached to restaurateur Rosa Sanchez (Marisol Nichols), and Tony has an office meeting with her. At the precinct, Danny Reagan (Tom Selleck) pretends to be having heart problems in an attempt to get out of work early. After a security guard takes him into holding, he is charged for indecent exposure and placed on home detention. Later, in holding, he notices that the security guard's keys are missing and sees that his brother Sean is lying face down next to him in full uniform. Danny notices a copy of Raoul Diaz's (Danny de la Calle) ledger, so he looks through the cell and finds a note from Diaz saying that his COO is assaulting an inmate. Danny calls Danny's attorney, Jamie Reagan (Steve Harris), and then passes on the information. Jamie meets with the DA, where he informs the DA that Diaz is known for abusing inmates at various hotels and restaurants, which makes Jamie feel that Danny was framed. Meanwhile, Bishop Verona of the Vatican sends Joseph Keane to New York to investigate the Archbishop's murder. Leo Thompson informs Councilman Dubois of Frank's arrest; he wants to set a pre-trial arraignment to keep Frank in custody until Martinez's testimonial is to be re-enacted in open court. Liam Fitzpatrick (Sean Blakemore) and his investigator, Detective Giovannini (Joely Colon), are convinced of Leo's good intentions. However, Provenza explains his and Sean's

Divergent behavior of intracellular hemoglobin migration in mammalian livers: capillary oxygen depletion precedes hepatic hypoxia. An important aspect of oxygen delivery to mammalian cells is its distribution and concentration within the vascular network. Successful oxygenation of the tissues occurs despite the fact that most hepatocytes within the organ are supplied by a series of arterioles. Perinerve fibers (PNF), a novel population of hepatic myelinated nerve fibers that have been described recently, may modulate the hepatic oxygen delivery profile within the organ. Here, we report the existence of a new specific staining pattern that shows the "inner" (PNF) compared to the "outer" (parenchymal) hepatocytes while there is no staining of the sinusoidal endothelium in the liver. The pattern associated with the periportal region was found to be reversible. In addition, since the adult liver mainly expresses hemoglobin for O(2) storage and utilization, we investigated the intracellular migration pattern of the hemoglobin (bHb) in well-oxygenated animals. Under normal conditions, bHb was shown to move from extravascular hemoglobin pools mainly into the hepatocytes of the periportal area. For the next 30 min, little change was seen in the bHb distribution, whereas a dramatic shift into the extralobular hepatocytes was noted within 1 h, followed by the near-complete disappearance of bHb in 3 h. For the remainder of the time frame, bHb was detected mainly in the extralobular hepatocytes. The results indicate that PNF are associated with bHb. This may represent a new kind of "junction" that is involved in the movement
