The Lions wide receiver, who had six receptions for 115 yards in three games last season, had a much bigger deal this year. He decided to skip the CFL and sign a deal with the Patriots, and every day he's getting bigger. "No, I didn't," Dorsett told John McClain of the Houston Chronicle. "I'm a big guy. I'm 6-foot-6. I'm probably 280 or more pounds." While Dorsett certainly is large, he's actually closer to 220. Regardless, he also found time to talk about his decision to leave the CFL, the process that led to his decision, and why he left the Argos. "It's tough, like I said, to come into the league a big, strong guy and find a spot," he said. "I didn't know where I was going to go, but they kind of surprised me with the choice. I just went on and I had a good time." That's not surprising. The Argos didn't do much for Dorsett, but they did just about everything they could to damage his brand. Plus, the move to Hamilton was a tough one on many levels. Whether you agree with the Argos' decision to let Dorsett go or not, they did what they could to send him packing. Ahead of his appearance at today's Google I/O keynote, Samsung is ready to announce a few big new hardware details. The company has revealed a mysterious "Personal Area Network" (PAN) as part of its latest Galaxy Note lineup, as spotted by Android Police. It's arriving this summer, and it'll work with the S Pen. The Galaxy Note 8 and Note 9 don't appear to have much more in common than the Note 8's display and S Pen, so it's unclear why Samsung would be introducing a new platform for its stylus.
