Looking at the list of Gonzagongame's deaths - and knowing that they will keep adding more to it (estimated at around 15 more deaths by the end of the year). I thought it would be a good time to create this thread. Gonzagongame is a game where you engage in daily deathmatch battles in the spirit of old-school episodes of the TV show, where death has consequence, and you have to earn your way back into the scrap-and-be-killed league. Rules are laid out in a list on the user profiles. Facts about me are on my post. If you have more questions, feel free to ask. FAQ's: * Which class should I pick? - The answer is this: + Choose an overall strategy. If you plan to try for a win or loss or just take one person down and win, you should choose carefully. The fights, particularly the close fights, are awesome when played and executed correctly. In these cases, you go for one person at a time, and just kill them. There's no method to the madness. Then again, if you don't have a tactical plan (winning or losing), you're better off backing out now and finding another class or another game. If you come into the game poorly planned on how you're going to play, you will be very, very, embarrassed and may never return. + You'll be at a loss for words when you realize that you chose to play a character that isn't weak against a boss or flying axe in general. Your character will get banged up really fast and at a relatively low skill level, and will be confused and disoriented a lot. A hit from a blade or fire can both cause you to be stunned (either knocked down, and at least 1/2 turns slower, or stuck in a lock as some attacks may now hit you), or cause you to bleed out of 2 or more hearts. You will be much better off if you have a backup strategy that allows you to kill bosses (including killing Samba Beast) at a fast and quick killing pace. Be wary of big characters, however, that can hit you hard for a few reasons... A. Their attack functions depend on a few stats along with how much HP you have. This means you can be stunned or knocked down if you have low health, but not if you have a lot of health, for instance. It also depends

The name of the game is to eat as much as possible, without anyone realizing you are in the bar. You can eat some food from the menu table, but other than that, you can eat what you can find. You might even see the cooks and be able to steal something from their kitchen.

If you run out of space, you can take a breather in the bathroom. Just make sure there is a lock on the door, though! Don't waste time, though, because the best thing to do is take a short, not-so-fatal break at the top of the bar.
