The applications allow you to modelÂ .Crawfish is the official state dish of Louisiana, and despite the recent popularity of the national crawfish boil, it's still a popular option in New Orleans. The boiled crustacean was once a staple food for the poor and immigrants; boiled crawfish was eaten on the spot, out of a paper bag, and leftovers were cooked down into a starchy paste known as dip. Classic New Orleans Creole gumbo, which is our spin on a Cajun-Creole combination, is based on such a paste. According to one well-regarded gumbo cookbook, recipes for gumbo include a live sauerkraut, so you can imagine the kind of flavor that would have resulted. Tasty boiled crawfish may not necessarily be the healthiest option, but, as the tongue of an ensconced crawfish continues to linger in the right places even after death, crawfish are heart-

CopyrightÂ .Tag: in-home ordering I'm fond of the phrase, "there are no stupid questions," but I'd like to rephrase it a little bit. There are some questions that are really easy to answer, even to the point of absurdity. I'm going to give you just a few examples of this; you can pretty much forget every other question. Do you have a small business? No. Actually, I don't even have a business, technically. I'm an independent contractor for a company that builds systems for other companies, so I'm really just a middleman between them and their customers. I don't earn enough to justify having my own business. Would you ever want to run for office? No. The thought of it is terrifying to me. I've never been good with people, or maybe that's just the way I am, but either way, it would be a nightmare if I had to deal with people at all. Someone would have to design an exercise machine that kept me in a single-digit BMI for me to be able to deal with that side of things. How do you do well on tests? I don't study for tests. The act of study itself is discouraging to me. I just breeze through whatever multiple-choice, fill-in-the-blank, true-false, or essay-or-so-you've-got-to-do sections come along. How many pets do you have? None. I'm allergic to almost anything with fur and the only animals I'm comfortable around are bird-like (grizzly, northern, spider, etc.) and cat-like (also grizzly, northern, etc.). What's your earliest memory? I was born. Have you ever been arrested? No. Have you ever been inside a U.S. courthouse? No. Have you ever been inside a police station? No. Have you ever been a victim of a crime? No. If not,
