READ MOREÂ .These protein-rich bars are also low in sugar, making them an ideal snack for young children who are just starting to eat solid foods, according to the lead author. The study also found that mixed nuts — commonly consumed as a snack in the U.S. — tended to benefit students' moods, perhaps owing to the macronutrients and micronutrients they contain. AD AD The results, published Thursday in the journal JAMA Internal Medicine, suggest that schools could focus on children's overall diet, rather than just offering healthier snacks such as fresh fruit and vegetables or limiting sugary beverages, Wolfson noted. "There's much more that can be done in school to better align nutrition with the environment." he said. While there is evidence that parents influence their children's eating habits. teenagers "are a very difficult population" to reach, Wolfson added. "They have all the tools that are necessary to make healthy food choices, but it's not a priority for them." For the 0cc13bf012

Technical Field The present invention relates to a light emitting device, an image forming apparatus, and a power supply method. 2. Background Art A light emitting diode (LED) is a light emitting element capable of being driven with a low voltage. Since the LED is excellent in power-saving and durability, the LED is employed in a variety of applications. In particular, the LED having a high light emission efficiency is extensively applied to a backlight of a liquid crystal display (LCD) or the like. Further, the LED is also anticipated to be employed in a large-sized illumination light device, an automobile lighting, and a signboard as a light source. When the LED is used in the above applications, a direct current (DC) voltage of a power supply for supplying the LED is inevitably converted into an alternating current (AC) voltage in a related-art LED driving apparatus, since the AC voltage is usually supplied from a commercial power supply. For this reason, the LED cannot be driven directly from the power supply having a
