textbox which is the same as the 'ID'? I am using modelbinding. e.g. @model WebApplication1.Models.ServiceUser @ { var re = new Regex(@"\[.*?\]"); var result = re.Replace(Request.Form["email"]); int a = 0; } Please input a User ID. User ID: @Model.UserID The email is inserted into the database. When i fill in the textbox it goes to my controller and to my view. However i want to get the actual text in the textbox. I tried to insert the value into a variable but i get null. Any ideas? A: Your code won't work as a client. The model binding won't actually work until a post comes into the controller. That's assuming you have a form submit button. However, the reason you're having this issue is because you won't have an actual value in your form when a post is made. So you should think about how you can get this data. You could grab the data from the posted model. E.g. [HttpPost] public ActionResult UpdateMyUser(UpdateUserModel model) { var

userId = model.UserID; var email = model.Email; } This would have the same effect as doing a GET and reading it from the Request. However, you may not want to expose that data to the rest of the world. Depending on your database security you could make your UserID into a field to which the data is stored
