Infection with hepatitis C virus (HCV) can cause progressive liver disease. We compared the numbers and functions of T cells in the circulation and liver of patients with chronic hepatitis C with those of HCV-negative controls. We found that patients with chronic hepatitis C have a reduction of circulating CD4+ T cells, a decrease of the response of T cells to HCV-pulsed autologous non-T cells, and a decrease of natural cytotoxicity in their Kupffer cells. Therefore, infection with HCV may be associated with cellular immune abnormalities. Interferon α -2b and mitotane in the treatment of diffuse low-grade B cell lymphoma. In recent years, the efficacy of systemic chemotherapy (CT) for diffuse low-grade B cell lymphoma (DLGL) has increased. However, DLGL still represents a significant challenge in terms of tumour control, relapse, and survival. Therefore, no standard treatment of DLGL currently exists, and the role of interferon α -2b (IFN α -2b) in combination with chemotherapy (e.g., CT and anthracycline-containing regimens) has yet to be elucidated. The aim of this study was to evaluate the efficacy and toxicity of CT plus IFN α -2b in DLGL and to suggest the most appropriate treatment. The efficacy of IFN α -2b and mitotane 595f342e71
