Avengers: Infinity War “Build them a boat,” and they’ll all want to go. (Captain America’s rather succinct sales pitch to his newer recruits, while Black Widow is preaching famous lines like “There’s a war coming, we must be ready for it.”) And now, any hopes that the Infinity War hype will die down in 2018 - and in particular, ever see any of the new characters that have accumulated over the past few years of inter-connected Marvel movies - are already being crushed by the first trailer for the mega-blockbuster. That’s the backdrop to the news that Infinity War might well be the biggest movie of 2018, in terms of ticket sales as well as attention. Greg Treinin, global director of marketing and distribution at Disney, tells Deadline that Infinity War will likely account for somewhere between 30 and 40 per cent of the box-office numbers of the entire year. And an industry insider noted to the site that it could account for “half of all film ticket sales in the US over the coming weekend,” and that also includes the multiplex and IMAX screenings. Looks like a lot of people are eager to see Thanos and those other inter-connected Avengers. Will the hype finally die down, or have we got an even bigger hype for The Revenge in 2017 and 2018? Via Screen Rant. Warning: huge Infinity War spoiler is included below. Avengers: Infinity War is released in the UK on May 4, 2018. (UK and Canada on May 3, 2018.) The first Avengers film released in 2008 and now the final chapter of the cinematic inter-connected
