GRIT is an action-RPG game with a focus on simulated survival that's light on dialogue. For that reason, along with its minimalist visual style, it's easier to learn, but harder to master. The main gameplay consists of the player moving around a randomly generated island, gathering resources and dealing with the monsters and other creatures that inhabit the island. The player must find and use what resources are available on the island to sustain themselves until they finally decide to build a raft to get off the island. All the dialogues will be optional. That said, while it's a game that's easy to pick up, there's a lot of depth to it. While the game doesn't offer a lot of storyline, the player will need to learn about how to survive if they want to make it to the end.

Crescentic glomerulonephritis in a newly diagnosed adult-onset systemic lupus erythematosus patient. Crescentic glomerulonephritis (GN) is a rare presentation of systemic lupus erythematosus (SLE). We report a new diagnosis of SLE in a 35-year-old woman with moderate proteinuria, nephrotic range proteinuria, persistent macroscopic hematuria, positive anti-cardiolipin antibodies (IgG and IgM), and proliferative glomerulonephritis on renal biopsy, without a history of previous SLE. A diagnosis of "secondary" non-Hodgkin's lymphoma was initially considered after renal biopsy. After resolution of the lymphoma, renal pathology demonstrated crescentic GN without immunofluorescence or cryoglobulin positivity, but with microangiopathic hemolytic anemia. In retrospect, at the time of diagnosis of secondary lymphoma, the patient had a positive antiphospholipid antibody, but at that point, there was no suggestion of a systemic SLE. The patient responded well to treatment of SLE with corticosteroid and cyclophosphamide. In our experience, in newly diagnosed patients with SLE without prior renal disease or a known connective tissue disorder, a biopsy of a renal lesion should be performed to make the definitive diagnosis of SLE. Crescentic GN is a rare complication of SLE, but may complicate the course of the disease. Physicians should be aware of the possibility of crescentic GN in SLE and should

The New Student Experience Getting Started As a new student, you will most likely need to cover costs related to your admissions, your first semester, and the continuation of your studies at Hana. In order to complete the processes involved in meeting your financial obligations to Hana, please follow the steps below:

- 1. Bureau of Student Accounts A student's first contact with Hana is when he or she begins to fill out an admissions paperwork. You will create an account (an account to manage all your bills & payments) in the Student Accounts system by using your Hana ID. The first day you register with your student account is the day your bills are sent out. Please see the Financial Info section for more information on bill payment.
- 2. Financial Info Upon starting your study at Hana, the financial department will send you an invoice which you will then pay via an automatic student account. To create your student account, we have separate systems and you will be giving us your information that you will sign in using your Hana ID. You can now create your account without having to call the Help Desk. You can change your information or your address by using online system at any time of the week (Monday to Friday from 8:00 am to 8:00 pm). There is no need to do this. We have your email address which allows us to send you invoices, new messages in your mailbox, inform you about Student Life, and much more. If you have any other questions, don't hesitate to go through the Daily Life pages.
- 3. Orientation and Registration Orientation is the first activity which takes place at Hana as all students are given a tour of the campus. Outside of Orientation session, Hana has three registration sessions. The admission session is for first-time enrollees, pre-university students as well as international/exchange/transcript students. The unaccredited degree session and the apprenticeship session are for students enrolling in one of our BA, B.Ed/M.Ed or BA.app student-teaching programs. Registration occurs once a semester. First-time freshman students register during registration day; as these students have not met with the rector. Pre-university students register during orientation.
