A: If you use the QTP 10.1 and you are a university student (or a student of any other place with special license), you can use the program by purchasing the academic version MathWorks has a free version of its QTP (Quick Test Professional) that gives you access to the program's online support resources and self-help materials, as well as for those who you purchase an academic version of the software, you can use this software for five years, after the purchase date. But if you dont have a special license to use the software (you are not university student), you will have to buy a license. Q: Python scripting in Google Docs I am trying to automatically generate a PDF of some text and I was thinking of doing this via the Google Docs API, but I'm not exactly sure how to do this. Is there a way to run Python scripts inside Google Docs? Any help is appreciated, thanks! A: The only way you can run Python scripts is through an add-on. To run a Python script, you would: Download and install the Add-on [Python Scripting for Google Docs] Create a Python script file. You can use any Python script available on the web - such as this one. Specify what it should do in the script. I'll go over each part in turn. script.py: `#!/usr/bin/env python """ Python Scripting for Google Docs Addon. """ import feedparser import feedburner from urlparse import urlparse import pytz import datetime import time import functools import urllib import re import mechanize import mechanize.http def DownloadCSV(url, app): """Downloads file from url using the app. Return: File name of file downloaded. """ file = urllib.urlretrieve(url) print "File downloaded to " + file return file def RunPythonScript(file, app): """This function takes a file name and the google docs`

Instead of letting me reinstall and repeat the same steps, it accepted my serial number without any issues and installed online updates to my trial version. I have also never experienced this issue on any other software, so I am fairly certain this is an error in CompTIA's system.. As soon as I found this out, I contacted their Support team, because if this is the case, I should be receiving a full license key for my problem. But all I received was a refund for the trial..
