As a result of which, Ansoft Designer 5.0.2 has been downloaded Niles Hollow Niles Hollow is an abandoned quarry in the town of Niles in Wayne County, New York. Within it lies the abandoned Niles Hollow Quarry and Museum. With approximately of slate, sand, and gravel, the mines are home to many animal species. History Niles Hollow was originally mined in the early 1800s for slate. By the late 1920s, it was no longer profitable to mine the slate in Niles Hollow; many mines such as Prescott, Boulder, and Canyon City had all been mined already, and the slate was simply an afterthought. By this time, quarrying the slate had become more profitable in nearby mines, such as Bradford and Menands. Around 1930 the quarry was shut down and continued to operate as a museum. The quarry reopened in 1990 with a new museum. Geology Aesthetically, Niles Hollow is a soft soil, similar to the soil in Bradford. The quarry is next to a pebble island, therefore there is a shortage of water. These features create erosional landforms, meaning that the quarry has been eroded over time. This, in turn, creates a softer, less abrasive, and smaller slate that can be cut. Therefore, the quarry in Niles Hollow was able to mine a large amount c6a93da74d
