the release announcement of v4.5.1rc_01087b2fad on the blog post you were redirected to has been removed. this is because this version is much less likely to have regressions. mac osx: the qt6 version was downloaded almost half a million times from the mac app store. it is now finally available for the mac app store. known issues: use the version from the release post. the release post has been removed. the version from the release post has failed to start at least one time on macos 10.15 catalina. we have reported the issue upstream but haven't seen any fix yet. qbittorrent v4.4.5 is now released. macos: the qt6 version was downloaded almost half a million times from the mac app store. it is now finally available for the mac app store. the release post has been removed. the version from the release post has failed to start at least one time on macos 10.15 catalina. we have reported the issue upstream but haven't seen any fix yet. qbittorrent v4.4.6 is now released. for windows only this version is released. macos: an appimage is now offered. it uses the latest versions of qt6, boost, libtorrent, openssl. it is created on ubuntu 20.04 and it should work on any other similarly aged distro. it isn't well tested. also ubuntu 20.04 is dropped from the ppas because it doesn't have the minimum required qt5 version (5.15.2). the appimage should cover any users left on that version. known issues: for some old linux distros it may not work. if you try to use ubuntu 20.04 (any version) then you may get a warning, asking you to install qbittorrent from the ubuntu or debian repos. the warning isn't very clear (because it was added recently) and the recommended action (use deb, not apt-get) is not the easiest to perform. 5ec8ef588b
