How to use a string variable inside of jquery function I want to create a simple function to change the background-color of a div, depending on the selected item of a select list. Right now, I have this: $(document).ready(function(){ $('#m').click(function(){ $('#h').css('background-color','green'); }); $('#m').css('background-color','orange'); }); $('#m').css('background-color','yellow'); }); $('#m').css('background-color','blue'); }); }); This works fine, but I want to make the string to be a variable instead, something like this: $(document).ready(function(){ var color; $('#m').css('background-color', color); }); $('#m').css('background-color', color); }); $('#m').css('background-color', color); }); $('#m').css('background-color', color); }); }); I tried to look up for some solutions, but couldn't find anything that worked, any help would be appreciated. A: You can get it using $('#h').css('background-color', color); if you want to set it to javascript variable you can do $('#h').css('background-color', color); Wednesday, June 23, 2008 Lunch with Lenuka This summer I have been working with the Montessori Method a lot, so I thought it would be fun to take some of the ideas and turn them into lunches for my little one. These are real quick but well compensated lunches that will get the mouths of my older one and baby busy for a little bit. The ingredients are all in the cupboards, and it's a matter of putting the food in the baby's cup and getting out the spoon (well, and drinking some milk). 3 comments: Anonymous said...
