
Windows 7 Enterprise Activation Key 12

A customer is planning to move to their company's Windows 7 Enterprise deployment. Instead of purchasing a KMS license, they chose to purchase Software Assurance (SA) on a Windows desktop licence and are requesting support and management from the reseller and from Microsoft and they have specified that they want help from the Microsoft Technical Assistance Center (TAC) to get the Windows 7 Enterprise activated. They have not yet purchased Windows 7 Enterprise Licences. Is their product compliant with the requirements of the Windows 7 Enterprise Activation Agreement? As a follow-up to my answer last week, I have received a need for Windows 7 Enterprise Activation Key (WAK) and I have resolved it for a live customer with MDM5 in my office. The customer is a medium-sized firm with 10,000 employees and has 4,000 desktops in the offices. This instance (duplicate for my testing lab) was requesting Windows 7 Enterprise WAK for their MDM 5 deployment. The MDM in question is MDM5. It is on all desktops, servers, and laptops. We are currently deploying Windows 7 on hundreds of labs. Our labs are fully distributed and have thousands of desktops. These computers are used for testing, analysis, development, and general work. Windows 7 is a real desktop for most of the labs. The lab environments require Windows 7 Enterprise as a requirement for some of the licenses. All of the labs will have Windows 7 Enterprise at some point in time. We deploy a few labs with Windows 7 Enterprise. Some of the labs will have active servers, others will be purely desktop labs.
