Keymacro is a standalone application that lets you control your keyboard shortcuts via a GUI, creating hotkeys for many common operations. It allows you to easily set up your favorite application's shortcuts, without using the GUI of that particular program. It's basically a tool with lots of shortcuts for Windows, and the fact that it's free doesn't hurt. In contrast to other shortcuts software, this one can set hotkeys for any program, and it doesn't mess with the keyboard layout. The PM.INI file contains settings for the programs in the PM.PST file. The PM.INI file is used in the registry, and includes fields for the following: * PMFile Name * PMFullPath Name * PMFileSize * PMFileDate * PMPassword * PMNewPassword * PMUserName * PMComposeEmail * PMComposeIP * PMEmailServer *

results of a query on the DB. It returns a JSON response, which is the result of a query that I've put in the code. My problem is that I can't seem to parse the JSON. I'm using Google Chrome, and I've tried to use a tool like jsonlint.com, jsonviewer.com and jsnop.net I'm simply trying to access the URL that's the results of this query, but when I do, nothing shows up. Here's the results: { "meta": { "limit": 10, "offset": 0, "total_count": 690,
