What's New In?

Z-DBackup is a professional backup tool that offers a broad variety of options and functions for both beginners and experienced users. The program comes with a number of different scenarios and is capable of generating backups of file systems on CDs/DVDs, USB disks, hard disks, and network storage. It can also work as a scheduling tool for periodic backups and allows you to backup archives, create ZIP or EXE files, and even convert files to different file formats. Z-DBackup can create backups of the entire hard drive, simply selected folders or individual files and is compatible with almost any data backup scheme. A specialized hard disk recovery utility comes with the package and allows you to scan hard disk drives and display the main directories or files that were damaged during a hard disk crash.The present invention relates to a cryogenic cold-shield and more particularly to such a cold-shield for use in an apparatus, such as a refrigeration-cycle system, a cryogenic air separation system or a cryogenic liquid storage system, for providing a substantially constant cold shield temperature. The assignee of the present application, Varian Associates, Inc., has developed a cryogenic cold-shield assembly that may be used in an improved manner to cool the cold shields of the housing and to otherwise maintain the cold shields at a constant or substantially constant temperature. The cryogenic cold-shield assembly of the present invention is an improved form of such an assembly and may be used in the manner described in the aforementioned co-pending patent application Ser. No. 463,119, incorporated herein by reference. Such a cold-shield assembly includes a heat transfer medium, such as a metal, cryogenic liquid that is used to cool the cold shields, and a cryogenic fluid, such as nitrogen, that is in thermal exchange with the heat transfer medium, flows past the cold shields, and is used to cool the housing of the cryogenic cold-shield assembly. The housing provides a hermetic seal to prevent the heat transfer medium from escaping and is also hermetic to prevent the cryogenic fluid from escaping. A cryogenic cold-shield assembly having the configuration described in the aforementioned co-pending application Ser. No. 463,119 is satisfactory in most applications. However, the temperature of the cold shields will change over the life of the cryogenic cold-shield assembly in accordance with the load on the assembly and the amount of refrigeration or cooling provided by the cryogenic fluid. As a result, the cold shields will increase in temperature during operation, requiring a thermal conditioning system for adjusting the cold shield temperature. One possible prior art method of preventing such temperature increases and losses of the heat transfer medium and the cold shields is to replace the cryogenic fluid with a gas of substantially the same temperature as the cold shields. For example, if the cooling system is a cryogenic air separation system, the air could be passed through a heat exchanger that is maintained at a low
